CABINET CHANGES

THE reasons behind Mr Macmillan's cabinet reshuffle now stand out a logy which generally accompanies these moves, we find that the Prime Minister has placed two formidable critics of Britain's merger with the Common wants them.

And where he wants them is assure you that the reported out of the way, at least at this moment as negotiations with the "Six" of the Deputy Foreign Common Market, assume a vital stage.

For Mr R. A. Butler as Leader | He showed a group of 31 negotiations were proceed-

Hopes

TOW, Mr Butler, who has "relinquished these Offices" at the request of Mr Macmillan, "who feels" the need of Mr Butler's assistance during the ensuing negotiations, is in no position to snipe at his own party.

The second critic was Mr Reginald Maudling, former President of the Board of Soviet Trade. In that position, he could have been quite a nuisance; but as the new Colonial Secretary he is more or less on the outside looking in, as far as the Common Market negotiations are concerned, he has made:

First stage

DUT this much is certain. The cabinet reshuffle is the end of the first stage in the decline and fall of Mr Butler.

This began in 1957 when he expected to succeed Sir Anthony: Eden. Instead Mr Macmillan took over from Sir Anthony, and now Mr Macmillan has seen fit to remove Mr Butler from his posts as Leader in the House of Commons and Chairman of the Conservative Party.

On the other hand, the fall of Mr Butler balances the rise of Mr Macleod.

These political fugues are dimentt...ta unravel. All that can be hoped in that they are performed in the best interests of Britain and her Commonwealth.

COALITION TALKS

Dr Konrad Adenauer today received leaders of the Free Democratic Party, his prospective coalition allies in the new West German Government, for a third session of talks on policy.

Informed sources said the accent today was on economic and social questions. Agreement on "important matters" of foreign and defence policy was announced after the second meeting last Thursday.

The Free Democrats are to decide on Thursday whether to call a party conference for October 21 to consider the results of negotiations with Dr Adenauer and other leaders of the Christian Democrats. The Christian Democrats lost their absolute majority in the Bundestag (Lower House) in the September 17 General Elections.

Thirty Western "peace marchers" paraded in Red Square, Moscow, the other day, carrying banners and distributing leaflets - but they were not allowed to make speeches.

Six of the thirty had set off from San Francisco last December, picking up recruits on the way to New York, and adding four from Britain before they began the long trek across Europe:

Banners and leaflets were in four languages, including Russian, and the theme was "American-European March, San Francisco-Moscow" and "We appeal to all peoples to disarm unilaterally".

Brad Lyttle, of New York, one of the leaders, said that the marchers would stay in Moscow for five days. Cyril Pustan, a plumber from Shoreditch, London, said: "I enjoyed every mile ... but I am glad I am not walking home. Two thousand miles by Shank's pony is enough for me." WATCH FOR THE REAL MIDDLE-EAST EXPLOSION

THE last few weeks in Cairo have been of the most singular interest and the revolution in Syria is likely in the ensuing months to have such a profound effect on the Middle East that it is well worth while from here to analyse its causes and effects.

At the root of the rebellion lies the economic situation. The bald fact is that in the last few years Nasser has tried to do too much. Wherever you go in Egypt signs of grandiose building schemes are to be seen. This has overstrained the economy without bringing many material benefits to the ordinary Egyptian. This in itself placed Nasser in a quandary for he has always stressed the material benefits of his policies.

Then his short-term programme of nationalisation and confiscation has completed the from Lord victoris circle by worsening strade and consequently the

WORDS AND MUSIC

FEW minutes after 11 o'clock one morning last week, in a plush little mews house in South Kensington, Mr Lionel Bart reached for a fat pencil and scribbled 10 words of a song lyric on a large sheet of white paper.

"No more bunking over walls," Bart wrote. "Duty calls, hallelujah, duty calls!" He underlined the words and sat back. Another Bart musical was finished.

It had taken him six years of thinking and planning, four months of actual writing. Now the show---"Blitz!" to be presented in London in the spring of 1962—was in the bag.

"Oliver!" had a successor. Mr Bart was still pretty wound up about the enterprise.

JACOBY on BRIDGE

THE average declarer is inclined to concentrate on his own hand and to ignore the possibility of setting up dum-my. This is a bad habit which will prove expensive on many occasions.

Without a trump opening, South would have an easy time with the diamond slam. He would lose a trick to the ace of spades and be able to make 12 tricks with a cross ruff.

The trump opening spoils this for him since a second trump lead will stop one ruff. Therefore, he must set up either the club or spade suit. If he goes after the clubs, he will run out of tricks one short of his slam.

The correct play is to win the opening lead in his own hand and lead a spade toward dummy. If West holds the nce, everything will be a cinch, but East produces the ace and leads a second trump.

This is the best defence, but is not going to be good

Advice

With memories still lingering in my mind relative to the steriing advices given by the noted writer, Charles Kingsley, to his son, Arthur, would you please allow me to bring to light through the medium of your esteemed paper the following wise words for the attention of our young readers.

"Remember that mere reading of wise books will not make you wise; you must use for yourself the tools with which books are made wise; and these tools are your eyes and ears, and senses and your brains, and pleaded guilty. learn what the Creator is tryby them."

Says the writer of the old story | years. Eyes and no Eyes, so it is, one hay goes through the world with his eyes open, another with his eyes shut, and upon this difference depends all the superiority of knowledge which one man acquires over

We have known sallors who had been in all quarters of the world and could tell nothing but the signs of the tippling houses, and the price and quality of the liquor. On the; other hand a certain famous sailor, Franklin, could not cross the English Channel without making observations useful to mankind. While many a vacant, thoughtless youth is whirled in his travels: through the world without gaining a single idea worth crossing the street for, the observing eye and inquiring mind find matter for improvement and delight in every rambic.

This knowledge the skilful tongue and ready pen will not fail to make the best use of, both when speaking and when writing letters, essays and description as Confucius sald, "A gentleman who never goes on cating till he is scated, who does not demand comfort in his home, who is diligent in business and cautious in speech, who associates with those that possess the Way and thereby corrects his own faults: -such a one may indeed be said to have a taste of cult to say something without Others may know much about the object or matter discussed, but not know how to say it in We should remember that just as the "Eye" only sees what it is first taught to see, so the mind correctly describes only what it is first taught to describe. They will also be surprised to find what a number of useful facts they already know, and may, with a little practice, express in complete statements if they only lay to heart the words of a great scholar, Lord Bacon, and many others. who wrote, "A good kind of questioning makes the half of knowledge." In order to learn to be one's | Marjorle and Low, Janie and said and done in the world: critically to inquire into it; to carry it out. It matters not what you learn; but when you once learn a thing, you must never give it up until you have mastered it.

Finally as concluding advice from the wisdom of the great Confucian disciple whose words are as meaningful today us they were some 2,000 years ago, when our much revered philosopher and teacher, Confucius, taught this simple truth about every aspect of life. Our Master said, "Those who are born wine are the highest type of people: those who become wise through learning come next; those who learn by sheer diligence and industry but with difficulty, come after that. Those who are slow to learn but still won't learn, are the lowest type of people." Y. T. MET.
